Rum has been distilled. own Whether it's eponymous rum, and the 18-year-old bottling is a good example of his craft. Rum was aged in new American oak casks from Kentucky, giving it notes of vanilla, oak and nutmeg. Clean it or sip on the rocks, and pair it with a nice cigar, if that's your thing. Guyana may not be the first country that comes to mind when you think of rum, but this small South American nation produces some high-quality spirits. El Dorado is a mixture of rum aged for a minimum of 12 years in the 12-year-old former Bourbon Casque, which gives it an undercurrent of spice, topped with signs of honey and oak that saturate the liquid. A great deal of rum is aged in the Solara system, meaning that there are both large and small liquids in the mixture. Kirk and Sweeney employed this practice as well for some statement expressions of their age. But the 18-year-old rum fully composed of juices that used before the batch mixed has spent at least that amount of time in American oak. The result is a dark amber-colored rum with notes of sherry, raisins, vanilla and oak on the palate. A relative newcomer to the scene, Parce Rum was founded by three brothers who were enchanted with Colombian rum. They source the pair with a father and son distillation team based in Bogota and mix their product. Parce bottles eight and three years old expressions, but the 12-year-old is the richest and most delicious, with big notes of toffee, tobacco and vanilla and a surprisingly dry finish. The brand plantation, owned by Cognac producer Maison Ferrand, gives french touch to its juices. Barbados 2002 Vintage was 15 years old-12 at Bourbon Cask in Barbados and three at Cognac Casque in France. This double-aging technique allows rum to spend time in cooler climates, reduce the part of the fairy and provide unique flavor from cognac casks such as tropical fruits, tobacco and vanilla. During Prohibition, famous rum runner Bill McCoy was your best bet for quality product. If you got your rum from him during those dark, dry days, you could count on him being legal. Real McCoy founder and CEO Bailey Pryor is a foundation of rum knowledge and insists on producing rum with integrity, honesty and transparency. Real McCoy is distilled into Coffey and Pot Stills in Barbados' Foursquare Distillery. Look for caramel and wooden notes at the 12-year-old, with spice and chocolate on the nose. nose.
